DAY 5: WAITSBURG TO PENDLETON

TODAY'S RIDE

No major climbs today, but it won't be a walk in the park either, as there is almost no shade because we're riding through wheat country. Expect to see wide-open spaces, ranches and farms most of the day.

Downtown Pendleton today isn't that different from 100 years ago.

The ride to the first stop in the beautiful Pioneer Park in Walla Walla includes a moderate two-mile climb when leaving Waitsburg (don't miss the wheat-field art!) and then some rollers. After the first stop we return to Oregon near Milton-Freewater and then ride through Dry Creek Gulch. We have to use Highway 11, the major north-route state highway in the area, for a few miles before lunch in Athena at the Caledonia city park.

After lunch we continue on sparsely traveled secondary roads north of the main highway to Pendleton. Our destination is the Pendleton High School grounds, which is within walking distance of the rodeo grounds. Let 'Er Buck!

NOTES AND NEWS

This is the page where you'll find important information, good stories along the way, and anything else we think you should know.

OPB IN PENDLETON

Oregon Public Broadcasting's program "Think Out Loud" will be broadcasting live from Pendleton Friday morning, and you're invited. Show up at the Community Room at City Hall for the 8-9 a.m. taping (enter on Emigrant Ave.; it's right at the end of the Westward Ho! Parade route). The topic of the show is the history of the Round-Up and the Native American experience. The room seats 40; first come, first seated.

NOTES FROM THE ROAD

People met along the way: Carol from Folsom, CA and Brad from Pasadena, CA, in a heated debate under the dinner tent over a serious topic: Is it OK to wear this year's T-shirt on this year's event? Sue: OK. Brad: not OK. Visual evidence around camp seems to side with Sue... Nicole Voorhees and Rob Stacey of Berkeley, CA, doing Cycle Oregon as their honeymoon. Nicole puts it simply: "We could go to Costa Rica or we could go to Cycle Oregon." They made their choice, and Rob wore his tuxedo jersey on Day One to celebrate... Kay from Portland, 68 years old and flush with the accomplishment of putting up and taking down a tent for the first time in her life. She's a member of the informal riding club Northwest Butts on Bikes; there are 14 of them on the ride. Kay was also sporting her custom "Mammo" jersey, emblazoned with the handprints of her grandchildren... Phil from Portland, showing his priorities. Riding his smokin' hot new Trek Madone (black with blue flames), he got to daydreaming and woke up to find himself heading off the road into gravel. He tried to control the bike, ended up overbraking on the front wheel, and went over the handlebars. Keeping his composure, he rolled on his shoulder... and saved the bike, holding it aloft as he tumbled. He got some scratches and blood; the frame was unscathed... New term, from an anonymous contributor: the WindHill Factor, "the degree to which a downhill is negated by a headwind." And finally, a joke that skirts the edge of tastefulness but makes people chuckle: "What do you call a Cycle Oregon booty call? A gear drop."

FREE JERSEY INFO

Today's lucky winner of a "Two & Oak" jersey from Stoll Berne is rider #77.

This guy goes by the name of "D." He's probably passed you.

Just like a snail, this guy carries his home on his back.

Cycle Oregon instills a sense of triumph in its riders every day.

Waitsburg resident Kailynn shows off her camel-handling skills.

Rick is a dude of many talents.

The descent back into town was both fun and beautiful.
